Spring 2026 Update

The construction of seven detached houses at Glenruthven Mill in Auchterarder, Perthshire, is progressing well.

Latest photographs from the site show that much of the external construction work on most of the houses has been done. The team is now focused on completing the internal fit-out of these houses, including all plumbing and electrical fixes. Some glass remains to be installed, but the roofs plus solar panels are in place. The stone cladding design features, and external hard landscaping, including garden steps and driveways, are now underway.

The houses are currently marketed for sale. You can view the listings on the agent's website here. Now that there is potential for sales viewings to be taking place, the on-site team has also put a lot of effort into making sure the new homes are presentable, including undertaking some basic garden soft landscaping and keeping the entire site tidy and organised.

The following photographs were taken on site in early March 2026.
